

Technology

Crypto

Chilean Court Orders Banks to Re-Open Crypto Exchange Accounts

- Banks closed accounts of crypto exchanges earlier this month
- Banks must re-open accounts while case is being heard

Photographer: Akos Stiller/Bloomberg

By Camila Russo

April 25, 2018 at 6:32 PM EDT

From Crypto

Chilean cryptocurrency trading platform Buda just persuaded a court to order a detente in its dispute with banks.

Chile's anti-monopoly court ordered Banco del Estado de Chile and Itau Corpbanca to re-open Buda's accounts while the exchange's lawsuit continues against 10 banks, including these two, according to the ruling published on the court's website. Buda sued after what it said was "arbitrary" and "unjustified" closing of its accounts.

Terms of Service Do Not Sell My Info \(California\) Trademarks Privacy Policy
©2022 Bloomberg L.P. All Rights Reserved
Careers Made in NYC Advertise Ad Choices Help